Abraham Lincoln's Integrity—An Interesting Story of His Early Life.

A correspondent of the Portland Oregonian sends this narrative:

To the Editor of the Oregonian.

The following incident in the early history of Mr. Lincoln, now the Republican candidate for President, illustrates more fully than any thing that can be said or done, his great integrity of character and his great integrity of heart.

It shows that he would take special care that not a dollar of the people's money should be used improperly.

During the Presidency of Gen. Jackson, and while Mr. Barry, of Kentucky, was Postmaster General, Lincoln held the office of Postmaster at the little town of New Salem, in Sangamon County, Ill.

The Government's portion of the receipts of the office for the year 1833, amounted to one hundred and fifty or two hundred dollars; all of which was permitted to remain in his hands, unclaimed by the Postmaster General, for three or four years.

Lincoln resigned the office, and moved to Springfield, where he now lives.

On the 15th of May, 1835, Mr. Lincoln, having succeeded Mr. Barry in the Post Office Department, set about relieving the party from its pecuniary embarrassments, by picking up the money which Mr. Barry had taken away as not worth the trouble of saving, and in the fall of 1835 or '36 drew on Mr. Lincoln, in favor of a small carrier, for the amount standing due him on the books of the Department.

The small carrier inquired of me for Mr. Lincoln at the same time, and he told me that he had received the money, and that it was a large sum for a poor man like Mr. Lincoln to retain on demand, and on making him known to aid him in his business.

He said he did not intend to assist him in his business, and returned in a few minutes with a package in his hand containing money, and on consulting it was found to be the exact amount called for by the carrier, and the very money received by him four and five years previous.

During all this period money was being loaned for three and four percent per month, and Mr. Lincoln was often, from inability to collect what was due him, sorely tempted to give it to him, and to let him have it for a few dollars to pay a board bill. Besides, it was then the policy of the Government to allow the banks to use the people's money for speculative purposes, and it was not thought wrong or discreditable for a Government officer to use the money in his possession, provided he was responsible for it.

For raising it when it was wanted for this purpose, Mr. Lincoln believed it was wrong to use what did not belong to him, and his desire to uphold integrity called him to resist, not only the temptation of "financing poverty," but the all powerful influence of public opinion.

Now, Mr. Editor, I feel very sure that when the people come to understand the true character of Mr. Lincoln, and reflect upon the present use of the people's money, and the great need of reform in this particular, they will say of Abraham Lincoln in 1835, that he was a man of the highest integrity, and that his conduct was a lesson to all men.
